More than $63.3 Million Awarded to Colleges and Universities to Strengthen Global Competitiveness through International Studies and World Language Training

OCTOBER 8, 2014

Contact: Press Office, (202) 401-1576, press@ed.gov (<mailto:press@ed.gov>)

The U.S. Department of Education today announced the award of 269 grants, totaling $63,354,605 to institutions of higher education to strengthen the capacity and performance of American education in foreign languages, international and area studies, teacher preparation, and international business education.

"Life in the 21st century means adapting to the most hyper-connected, interdependent world we've ever seen," said Secretary Duncan. "To help keep America safe, partner effectively with our allies, and collaborate with other nations in solving global challenges, we need professionals with solid cultural knowledge and language skills that cover all parts of the globe. These grants will enable more students and educators to gain global competencies that equip them with an understanding and openness to cultures and languages around the globe, as well as the 21st century skills needed to preserve a rich, multicultural society and thriving democracy right here at home."

Funded under five programs authorized by Title VI of the Higher Education Act of 1965, these grants are designed to help the United States enhance its leadership role in world markets, global engagement, and scholarship. This year, funded projects address the Administration's goal of broadening access to international and foreign language education by traditionally underserved students, faculty and institutions through collaboration with Minority-Serving Institutions, community colleges, and teacher education programs. Also for the first time, grantees will take financial need into consideration when awarding fellowships to graduate and undergraduate students in language and area studies training programs.

These five programs are:

- Centers for International Business Education (CIBEs): $4,571,400 to 17 institutions of higher education. CIBEs provide consulting on international business and marketing to businesses in their areas, develop business language curriculum, and teach international business topics to undergraduate and graduate students. They also provide instruction in critical foreign languages and international fields to improve understanding of the cultures of countries that trade with the United States. Grantees will partner with businesses and professional associations to offer internships and other real-world experience to prepare career-ready international business students.
- Language Resource Centers (LRCs): $2,799,168 to 16 institutions of higher education. These centers serve to improve the nation's capacity to teach and learn foreign languages effectively through activities such as developing teaching materials for K-16 foreign language instruction; research and dissemination of effective language teaching methods, conducting intensive summer language institutes; and training in administering and interpreting language performance tests.
- National Resource Centers (NRCs): $22,743,107 to 100 institutions of higher education. These centers teach at the undergraduate and graduate levels and conduct research focused on specific world regions, international studies and the teaching of less commonly taught languages. Activities include K-16 teacher training programs that provide a keen understanding of the culture, history, politics, and economics of these regions; working with overseas institutions of higher education and other organizations located in the NRC's area of study, and collaborative projects with other centers and institutions that address themes of global importance.
- Foreign Language and Area Studies (FLAS) Fellowships: $30,398,500 to 105 institutions of higher education to support FLAS fellowships at 118 colleges and universities. The FLAS fellowship program complements the NRC program, providing opportunities for outstanding undergraduate and graduate students to engage in area studies and world language training at schools that have established a FLAS fellowship program. Academic year and summer fellowships may be used at the home institution or an approved overseas program.
