What Do You Know About Canada?

"Dear [Uncle] Sam..." writes Pierre Berton

"As for culture -- we don't even speak the same language. You think of culture in terms of opera, ballet and classical music. To us it covers everything from Stompin' Tom Connors to Hockey Night in Canada. What is merely 'industry' to you is culture to us. Books, movies, radio, television -- all culture. Anne Murray is culture. Wayne and Schuster are culture. Maclean's magazine is culture. Farley Mowat is culture. The government subsidizes them all, in one way or another, because all are genuine Canadian artefacts, distinct and unique, something we have that nobody else has -- the ingredients of our national mucilage (p. 9)."

Developments and Activities

HAPPY New Year from the Pacific Northwest National Resource Center on Canada at the University of Washington and Western Washington University.

At the University of Washington

Every autumn is equated with grant writing. Fall 1993 was no different, except the Center in conjunction with Western Washington University submitted a new competitive application to the U.S. Department of Education for 1994-97.

Expanding the scope of the Program, several faculty with research and teaching interests on Canada decided to affiliate themselves with the Canadian Studies Center:

- Mr. Thomas J. Dowd, Affiliate Professor, School of Marine Affairs, has a distinguished national and international record of meritorious service to the global community, especially in Canada and the United States, on matters related to trade and transportation.

- Professor Marc Hershman, School of Law and Interim Director, School of Marine Affairs, teaches two Canadian content courses, advocates outreach and represents one of the visionaries behind the Odyssey Project to create Seattle's Contemporary Maritime Museum, where "Imagination Meets the Sea."

- Dr. Barbara Iliff, Lecturer, Art History, recently completed her Ph.D. at the University of Washington under the guidance of Dr. Robin Wright, Curator for the Burke Museum and Professor of Art History. Dr. Iliff currently teaches a Program elective course and one of the most popular classes on campus, "Northwest Coast Indian Art."

- Assistant Professor Anne Ilinitch, Business, is a recipient of a CIBER grant to study the competitive response of Canadian, U.S. and Scandinavian wood product exporters to changes in European standards. She is also involved in testing the Porter model of competitive, international advantage while holding industry constant and comparing Canada, U.S. and New Zealand forest product producers.

- Assistant Professor Katharyne Mitchell, Geography, received her Ph.D. in 1993 from the University of California - Berkeley. Her dissertation was titled, "Facing Capital: Cultural Politics in Vancouver." Research interests include immigration and settlement in Western Canada.

- Professor David Olson, Political Science, currently occupies the Harry Bridges Chair in Labor Studies, teaches "Politics of Labor" and conducts research in matters related to Canadian ports and organized labor. He is the author of "Comparative Analysis of West Coast Port Authorities" and a frequent lecturer off campus.

During the quarter several other activities were undertaken. Center faculty and staff attended the Association of Canadian Studies in the United States biennial conference in New Orleans. Preparation for winter and spring conferences and seminars was ongoing. The programs are highlighted on page one of the newsletter. Two, mini-Canadian video series were held at the University for elementary children and their parents. A draft of the Center's resource lending list was assembled for use by k-12 teachers, community college instructors, faculty and students. Furthermore, the Center has drafted a proposal in support of distance education related to course offerings and outreach.
At Western Washington University

In the aftermath of Western's conference, "Building Bridges to Sustainable Communities," an executive summary was released. The summary emphasized the need and rationale for conferences of this type, reiterated the goals and objectives, described the conference format and highlighted the perceived outcomes. A party to the National Resource Center, Western wrote their portion of the 1994-97 Title VI proposal. Several of their faculty attended the ACSUS conference in New Orleans and presented papers. Among those were Dr. Debra K. Salazar and Dr. Donald Alper, who presented "Environmental Politics and Forest Policy in British Columbia;" Dr. Maurice Foisy, who presented "NAFTA and Continental Democracy;" Dr. Robert Monahan, who presented "Canadian Studies Developments in Pacific Northwest Washington;" and Ms. Lyne Masland, who presented "From Abjection to Transformation: The Mother Figure in Works by Hébert, Blais, Roy and Boucher."

Faculty and Staff Activities

Supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation, the research and funding are scheduled for a three year period ending in 1995. As a team, Dr. Hargus and Ms. Kris Gunlogson plan to prepare a detailed description of the productive patterns of verbal morphology with the syntax and the phonology; improve the lexical documentation of this language via augmentation and refinement of existing computerized dictionary files and make the results of this research available in a form that will be useful to language teachers and community leaders.

- Professor Douglas Jackson, Geography and International Studies, made television appearances on KIRO, KING and KOMO TV stations in the aftermath of the Canadian federal election. He also spoke on Canada at a Rotary luncheon in Lynnwood and at Shoreline Community College and Western Washington University.

- Associate Professor Richard Kielbowicz, Communications, completed the required paperwork for his new course, "Mass Media in Canada," which will become a permanent class in the School of Communications curriculum.
