HISTORY COURSES

HSTAA 386
Post-Colonial Latin America
5 cr
TTh 130-320
TBA
Rodriguez-Silva

QZ - See Time Schedule for Quiz Sections

This course examines the thorny and winding paths that Latin American and Caribbean countries followed to build independent nations out of colonial territories. Students will explore the new challenges the emerging nations faced in their attempt to forge unified territories. But most importantly, the course analyses how the centuries under colonialism produced material, ideological, and cultural barriers that would not only be difficult to surpass in the centuries to follow but would acquired new meanings throughout time deepening internal fragmentation. In this course, students will have the opportunity to answer basic questions about the social history of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries in Latin America and the Caribbean but will also consider the major cultural transformations in the processes of national state formation.

Course offerings are subject to revisions. Please check the on-line Time Schedule for possible changes.
HIST 388 – HISTORY MAJORS ONLY

Intro to History: "Understanding Empire & Colonialism in the 20th Century: The Puerto Rican Case"

W 130-320
CHL 025
Rodriguez-Silva

The objective of the course is to introduce new history majors to the various approaches to the study of history. In so doing, students will learn about the processes of selecting, reading, and interrogating diverse types of primary sources (memoirs, oral histories, music, documentaries, TV shows, official reports, letters, and census data) to answer different research questions. Thematically, the course examines the case of Puerto Rico in order to analyze how various (and contradicting) social, political, economic, and cultural factors have contributed to sustain colonialism through the twentieth century, an entangled situation with no solution in the near future. History majors only Periods 1 & 2. History majors have priority Period 3. No graduate students from any department; no auditors or access students.

CONTEMPORARY LATIN AMERICAN COURSES

JSIS 478/HONORS 394b
Special Topics Global: "Borderlands of Western Civ."
5 cr

TTh 130-320
THO 331
Lucero

"The Borderlands of Western Civilization" will survey some of the key “border-making” events and forces in the Atlantic World. While not strictly a history course, it would be organized chronologically and thematically as an interdisciplinary exploration of some of the critical borderlands of the modern world. Briefly, the course will explore the workings of religion, race, gender, empire and nation in the construction of modernity. Some of the topics covered include the Re-Conquest in Iberia, Conquest in the Americas, state-making and revolution in the Atlantic World.

JSIS A /POL S 322
International Political Economy of Latin America
5 cr

TTh 830-1020
SMI 304
Sinkler

In this course we will explore recent and historical trends in Latin American countries and consider how political action has affected economic development, as well as how economic development has constrained and enabled new forms of political action. In doing so, we will address both major substantive issues in the region as well as important theoretical debates that have informed the study of Latin American political economy. Why has Latin America “fallen behind” North Atlantic countries? Why are poverty and inequality such pervasive problems in a region with the potential for great abundance? Does economic globalization improve or hinder the prospects for economic development in the region? Upon finishing this course, students will be in a position to formulate answers to these questions and enter one of the central debates that motivates the study of this major world region.

JSIS A 324/LSJ 322

CHSTU 101  Intro to Chicano Studies  5 cr
MW 830-1020  THO 101  Sanchez
QZ - See Time Schedule for Quiz Sections
Selected themes in Chicano experience; studies in Chicano politics and Chicano socioeconomic concerns. Targeted and relevant themes in the Pan-Hispanic and Chicano experiences; studies in Chicano historical, cultural, political, and current socioeconomic experiences. This course will review, through the prism of history, sociology, gender, anthropology, religion, education, art, and culture, the many dimensions of this culture group. Class discussion, readings, audio visuals, guest speakers, and class lectures will combine to give the student an understanding of the history, culture, experience, and heritage of Chicanas/os/Hispanics in the United States. We will learn to apply this information in the context of current issues. Class information is designed to be used as tools that can be applied in other disciplines so that the student can more effectively work or interact with this population. The student will have ample opportunity to discuss and critically analyze the ideas presented in the classroom, and open forum. Applications to real life practicalities are very much emphasized.

CHSTU 260  Intro to Chicano Politics  5 cr
TTh 830-1020  THO 134  Salas
Surveys the political position and activities of Mexican-American peoples in the United States from two perspectives: (1) Chicanos as objects of the political process of U.S. life, (2) contributions of the Chicano people to U.S. politics. This course will address the important issues of Chicano/a politics. These issues include, the Vietnam War, the farm workers struggle, third party politics, Chicana rights, the student protest movement post-1960s issues. Students will be divided into political groups to address some of these issues. Each group will have a candidate/leader, campaign manager, Democrat, Republican, Chicana activist and campaign workers.

GWSS 451  Latina Cultural Production  5 cr
TTh 1230-220  CMU 228  Habell-Pallan
Explores the expressive culture of Chicana/Mexican American/Latina women in the United States. Cultural and artistic practices in home and in literary, music, film, spoken word, performing and visual arts. Focuses on how Chicana/Latina writers and artists re-envision traditional iconography.

HIST 485  Comparative Colonialism  5 cr
TTh 130-320  GWN 201  Rafael
Explores the historic roots and practices of colonialism throughout the world, focusing on the roles of nationalism, cosmopolitanism, and imperial domination. Treats colonialism as a world event whose effects continue to be felt and whose power needs to be addressed. What is colonialism and how does it historically come about as an integral aspect of the formation of the West after 1500? How does a study of colonial practices and imperial regimes allow us to critically approach the ways by which Western encounters with non-Western peoples produce relations of power and inequality? What are the various ways by which colonized peoples comprehend and respond to the demands of colonial rule? What role does nationalism play in determining the limits and possibilities of colonial rule and native responses? In addressing these questions, this course will examine a variety of historical, literary, and cinematic productions set in colonial contexts. ranging from the Americas to Asia and Africa, including the recent US "war on terror." In doing so, the course will treat colonialism as a world historical event whose effects are still at work and whose power continue to hold sway.

JSIS B 100
Issues in International Studies: "Global Engagements"
5 cr
MW 230-420
CHL 015
Warren, J.
US universities have increasingly advocated and embraced global engagement and citizenship as a priority. This represents a departure from an emphasis on national interests in the direction of cosmopolitanism. It also presents an alternative set of ethics to the utilitarianism that has dominated common sense and political discourses for much of the past three decades. This lecture class will review this change, the causes behind it, and its significance. It will also offer direction about how to be effective global citizens. The history of global engagement is littered with many failures that in some cases has done more harm than good. But there are also many success stories. We will study both, with the objective of sorting out the ingredients that lead to constructive global activism.

JSIS B 331
Political Economy of Development
5 cr
TTh 1130-120
SMI 205
Latsch
In this course we will take a close look at the question “why some are so rich and most are so poor”. Development has something to do with prosperity and something to do with well-being, and the two appear to be correlated. Very few countries have managed to become truly prosperous on both counts – and that is the biggest puzzle and challenge to anyone trying to make sense of the global economy and international relations. Ideas about development have changed a lot over the past sixty years; JSIS B 331 will investigate what development means in the context of an understanding of the forces of economic growth, and we will investigate how different ideas about development and growth might guide policy. We will look at various promising paths and various dead ends in the quest for growth and the quest for improvements in incomes and standards of living. Understanding the roles of governments and markets in different parts of the world is an important part of understanding the gap between rich and poor. To what extent can the different institutions in different countries help us understand their desire and ability to improve the lot of their citizens? We will try to get to grips with the gap between rich and poor countries by talking about the respective role of geography, history and institutions, and by investigating the possibilities and limits of helping poor countries achieve sustained growth in per capita incomes.

W 230-520
Todd
During the last quarter of the twentieth century, state-sponsored violence and civil war displaced millions of people from their homes in the Central American isthmus. This course explores the experiences of the displaced – in particular, those who fled across international borders to become refugees. Focusing on Salvadoran and Guatemalan refugee communities

Course offerings are subject to revisions. Please check the on-line Time Schedule for possible changes.
in Honduras and Mexico, we will examine the dynamics of refugee identity (with special attention to issues of indigeneity and gender); explore strategies of survival and resistance; and trace prominent themes including nation, citizenship, borders, colonialism, imperialism, rights, and humanitarianism.

JSIS A 492 B

Latin American Studies Seminar (I&S): "Indigenous Encounters"

MW 1030-1220
PAR 322
Garcia

The images of, ideologies about and insecurities over “Indians” have had a powerful impact all over the globe. In particular, since the first encounters between European and Native peoples in the territory now known as America (North, Central and South), the “imagined” Indian has played a critical role in shaping ideas of civilization, nationhood, and progress. This seminar explores these early discourses as well as more recent ones regarding the “return” of Indigenous peoples to public life. Additionally, in this course we will interrogate important debates about the relationship between social science and Indigenous struggles by exploring representations of Indigenous peoples in film, literature, the media, and academic writings. We will delve into ethnographic explorations of Indigenous struggles, and contemplate the implications of Indigenous resistance that has included the “post-modern” rebellion of the Zapatistas in Chiapas, the emergence of transnational Indigenous intellectuals in universities and cyberspace, and the controversial tactics of gaming among Native Americans in the U.S. While our focus will be on the Americas, we will also consider the politics and poetics of Indigenous representations in other parts of the world. Finally, in this seminar we will critically examine central concepts like “culture,” “gender,” and “race” that are part of the discourses of authenticity and survival that shape the ways in which scholars, state officials, and Indigenous leaders and intellectuals engage each other.
