-----------	--------------------	----------------

This course is located at the crossroads of two fields: feminism and development studies. It is organized in five units. The first unit will provide an introduction to the main concepts of the course. Regional trends in gender and economic development and the measurement of development and its effects on women will be the topics of critical discussion. We will also compare "reality" with "representation" of "Third World" women. The second unit of the course is on theories of gender and development. The theoretical and ideological underpinnings of different theories of development will be discussed. In the third unit the connections between patriarchy, the state, and development will be mapped looking at specific policies and programs. The roles of the state, NGOs, feminist and women's groups in designing, shaping and implementing policies and programs will be explored in the context of (i) the food crisis and poverty and (ii) health, population and reproductive rights. The fourth unit is on gender and development in the context of globalization and Structural Adjustment Policies. The focus of this unit is current processes of economic re-structuring in both the "Third World" and here in the U.S. The fifth unit is on cartographies of "development"; it focuses on grassroots conceptions of development and those of policy planners using gender-sensitive policy frameworks

This course is an introduction to the history of science from prehistory to the early seventeenth century, and to the means by which historians of science construct such narratives. It will begin with the idea of science as a culture's systematic worldview, dependent on a view of nature in context, by looking at cosmological ideas in prehistory. The course will then look at the creation of natural knowledge in Egypt, Mesopotamia, classical Greece and Rome, early Islam, medieval and renaissance Europe. We will look at questions of cause and effect related to astronomy, optics, mathematics, the sciences of motion, biology and medicine, and relate them to cultural contexts.

SLN: 7680 SIS 426 A WORLD POLITICS (5 Cr) A PRAKASH

TTh 1:30-3:20 EE1 125

This is an advanced course in international relations. The course has three objectives. First, is to understand the questions of war and peace historically as well as in the post Cold War era. Second, it to explore how globalization -- its form, pace, and impact -- is influencing and is getting influenced by politics. Third, we will examine how and under what conditions non-state actors such as NGOs, multinational firms, and international organizations influence world politics.

ETHNICITY & NATIONALISM

TTh 1:30-3:20 SAV 209

This course aims to explore the causes and means of containing nationalist conflict in the contemporary world. It does so by asking three questions: (1) What accounts for the timing of nationalist conflict? (2) Who becomes nationalist and why? And (3) what means, if any, are there of containing the conflict? These questions will be explored with respect to several concrete cases of nationalist conflict (to be determined). After we have a general understanding of these cases, we will then turn to debates about the means of containing nationalist conflict. These debates revolve around the concept of multiculturalism.

SLN: 9160 SIS 490 B SPECIAL TOPICS (5 Cr) F. LORENZ
INTERNATIONAL LAW & USE OF FORCE

MW 1:30-3:20 BLM 201

The focus of the course will be the conditions under which military force might be justified on the world stage. There will be a significant portion of the class devoted to the war against terrorism, and world events since September 11, 2001. Has the US response been reasonable and in accordance with international law? There will be a major emphasis on current US policy in the Middle East, Afghanistan, and possible military action against the "axis of evil," including North Korea and Iran. The course will be a combination of lecture and classroom discussion, and will include role playing "exercises" in which students will present arguments from different points of view.

ARAB-ISRAELI CONFLICT (5 Cr)

E. GOLDBERG

MWF 10:30-11:20 FSH 102
TTh 12:30-1:20 GLD 435

This course will examine the Arab-Israeli conflict during this century as a process with three distinct phases. The first phase lasted from about 1905 to 1948 and was primarily a conflict between Jewish immigrants and Palestinian Arabs to create basic institutions of a state. The second phase, from 1949 to 1984, was primarily a conflict between existing states. The third phase, from 1985 to the present has again become a conflict between a Palestinian community in the West Bank/Gaza and Israel over the creation of new state institutions. The basic institutions of a state include the armed forces, central bureaucracies, representative institutions and legal systems which undertake the substantive tasks of defining property rights, allocating goods, and adjudicating conflicts. The Arab-Israeli conflict is thus properly several conflicts, between the Zionist and Palestinian movements, between Israel and the surrounding Arab states, and between the Palestine Authority and Israel. Special attention will be paid to ecological issues, primarily water use, as a way to better understand contemporary dimensions and the larger implications of this conflict. We will examine these conflicts separately. This course is not designed, however, as a historical court of last resort or to provide judgments against parties to the various conflicts.

Study of the practical and theoretical challenges associated with global ecological interdependence. Examination of international treaties and institutions, state, and nonstate actors with an emphasis on the emerging concept of sustainability.

Is global environmental degradation likely to enhance the prospects for cooperation among nations? Can existing institutions respond adequately to the challenge of global ecological interdependence? Is the empowerment of new non-state actors like environmental organizations and scientists likely to stimulate changes in the international system as a whole? This course will seek to answer these theoretical questions in light of recent practical efforts to deal with trans-boundary environmental problems like tropical deforestation, acid rain and ozone losses. We will also explore our personal role in global environmental issues, with an emphasis on consumption patterns.
