The course will trace the dramatic transformation of the pagan Roman empire to the Christian Byzantine Empire during the Late Antique and Early Christian periods through the artistic and visual culture of the time. Starting with the third century and ending with the beginning of the eighth c. A.D. it will focus primarily on the art of the State and the art of the Church as reflections and witnesses of the political, and religious factors that contributed dynamically to the modification of the institutional structure of the pagan Roman empire, and gave rise to its new identity, the Christian empire of Byzantium that came to represent a new ideal of statehood that prevailed for more than a millennium.

Introduction to the development of the religious ideas and institutions of ancient Israel, with selected readings from the Old Testament and New Testament. Emphasis on reading The Bible with literary and historical understanding. A rapid study of readings taken from both the Old and New Testaments, focusing mainly on those parts of the Bible with the most “literary” interest—narratives, poems and philosophy.

HISTORY
Survey course is an introduction to the history of the modern Near East. The main objective of this survey is to familiarize you with the history of modernity in the Near East, which began at the end of the eighteenth century and led to the complicated events of the twenty-first century. The chronological emphasis begins with the Ottoman reforms of the late 1700s, and ends with the emergence of modern nation-states in the 1900s. The survey examines the changes and continuities in Ottoman Empire, Persian and Arab lands; it includes Ottoman Empire and Modern Turkey (Anatolia and the Balkans), and the Arabic, Hebrew and Kurdish speaking regions (Arabian Peninsula, North Africa, Israel, Iraq, Syria, Jordan, and Lebanon), and Iran. The focus is on the following topics: reformism, colonialism, nationalism, and religion in the Ottoman Empire, the development of Arab socialism and capitalism, the world’s hunger for oil, the Israeli and Palestinian nationalism, and the emergence of modern Near Eastern leadership, among them, Atatürk of Turkey, Shah of Iran, and Saddam Hussein of Iraq.

An introduction to the history of cultural and economic interchange across Eurasia from approximately the beginning of the Common Era (CE=Christian Era [AD]) to approximately the beginning of the eighteenth century. The term "Silk Road" commonly designates the East-West overland trade routes, established around the beginning of the Common Era when Chinese silk began to reach the West and falling into disuse primarily because of Europeans' opening of sea routes to the East beginning in the late fifteenth century. The land routes were in fact many, some going north-south; the sea trade in the Indian Ocean was also important but will not be the main focus here. Arguably the patterns of "Silk Road" interactions continued down into modern times. Topics will include the importance of Inner Asian physical geography, the interaction of nomadic and sedentary peoples, the spread of important religions and resulting cultural syncretism, and, of course, the mechanisms and products of trade.
STALIN'S MUSLIM COMRADES AND ENEMIES

This senior history seminar examines twentieth century Central Asian history. The purpose of this seminar is to analyze the cultural and social impact of Stalinism in the region and on its people. It examines the expansion of the Bolshevik and Stalinist ideology into Central Asia. The readings include the secondary literature written mostly by scholars outside of Central Asia and some Central Asian primary sources. Although the focus of the course is the social and cultural history of the region, most of the required books provide a political history. The articles in the course package will help us understand the politics of social and cultural change in Central Asia. Given the time constraints of a quarter, the “region” is limited to Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan and Xinjiang of China. Our main goal is to learn about the ways in which the peoples of Central Asia forged their “Soviet” identities through cooperation, resistance and rebellion. We will address such specific topics as ethnic and national identity versus regional and local identity; sedentary life styles versus nomadism; traditional Islam versus Sufism; central socialist ideology versus localized socialism; and Soviet cultural establishment versus local cultural traditions.

INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

SLN: 7746 SIS 406 A POLITICAL ISLAM (5 Cr) C. ROBINSON
Offered jointly with POL S 432 A (SLN: 7306)

MW 2:30-4:20 MEB 248

Focusing on recent analysis of Muslim civil society and the Islamic public sphere, this course examines political Islam as a phenomenon produced at the intersection of universalistic and particularistic political cultures and in the spaces between political, religious, and social authority. The first part of the course examines the terms of analysis that social scientists employ to discuss ‘political Islam’ and ‘Islamic fundamentalism’. Students will examine the relationship between different forms of authority in Muslim societies and categories of Islamic political movements. The second part of the course will focus on anthropological case studies from South Asia, South East Asia, and the Middle East and examine how different publics produce moral judgments about political practices.

TTh  8:30-9:20  MGH 248

This course introduces students to the major theoretical approaches to international relations—Realism, Liberalism, and Marxism—and uses these approaches to address a variety of issues. For example, we will discuss the rise of the modern state system, the origins of WWI, the Cold War, the Gulf Wars, terrorism, genocide in Rwanda, free trade, North-South relations, the environment, and human rights. The principle aims of the course are to demonstrate how theory influences our explanations; to familiarize students with some important issues in international politics; and most important, to help students evaluate contemporary issues in international politics.

This survey of modern Hebrew literature and its major developments in the past 100 years includes selections of fiction and poetry by a range of authors from Europe, Israel and the U.S. even though more and more of this writing has become available in English in recent years, few American readers have appreciated the distinctiveness of modern Hebrew literature. This course aims to illuminate some of the factors that make this literature unusual and fascinating: the polyglot contexts that have had formative impact on literary expression in Hebrew; the longevity of Hebrew itself - a language that has been in continuous literary use over millennia; and the dramatic historical circumstances and ideological forces that fostered the revival of the language and shaped Hebrew literary endeavors up through current times.
