This course is designed as an advanced introduction to modern architecture in Africa and the Middle East, beginning with the initial European colonization of these regions in the mid-19th century. The complex interaction between modernity and vernacular references will be of particular importance to a historical understanding of the formation of distinctive regional and/or national identities in the architecture of this period. We will also be involved in the important task of examining contemporary architecture in Africa and the Middle East in light of the cultural and political legacy of Western colonialism.

INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

SLN:7235      SIS 422 YA      US & Contemporary International System (5 Credits)      BURROWES

TTh 4:30-6:50pm      THO 325

This course on the U.S. in the contemporary international system assumes that: (1) the international system changed fundamentally in the 1990s; (2) the U.S. is currently trying to figure out what the new international system is and what U.S. foreign policy in it should be; and (3) the "New World Order" and the U.S. policy appropriate for it that President Bush spelled out during the Gulf crisis in 1990-91 are probably not very good guides for the 1990s and first years of the new millennium.

SLN:7238      SIS 490 A      TECHNOLOGY & SOCIETY (SPEC STUDIES) (3 Credits)      D. WHBELER
(PD.1)

TTh 3:30-4:50      THO 331

The rapid spread of the Internet has created a revolution affecting all aspects of the global political-economy: cultural identity; interactions between states and markets; sovereignty and civil society. This course is an attempt to introduce students to how Internet driven forces (bandwidth, innovation, web) are affecting the orthodox mores and rules of the contemporary world system.
