“Central Asian Country Profiles I: 20 years of independence, Kazakhstan & Uzbekistan”, to be followed by a similar course in Spring 2011 focusing on Kyrgyzstan and Turkmenistan, will concentrate on significant developments in both republics since independence in 1991. Starting with an overview of the conditions both republics inherited from the Russian/Soviet colonial rule, the discussion will proceed to specific developments which shaped the national identity of Uzbeks and Kazakhs in a post-colonial setting. The course will look at the initial goals and aspirations as expressed in the national anthems, flags and constitutions and will discuss the different roads the two republics chose in reviving their traditions and values. In both republics, attention to their state languages, their history, literature, education, environment and other aspects of their culture, including Islam, constitute important areas of their efforts to regain their self-esteem. Throughout the course, Kazakh and Uzbek sources will be consulted in English translation, mostly provided by the instructor. Course requirements: One final paper. Its topic and a short abstract are due in the 6th week of classes. Regular class attendance is an absolute necessity.

HISTORY

SLN: 14562  HSTAM 315 A  BYZANTINE EMPIRE (5 Cr)  J. WALKER

MTTh  1:30 – 2:50  FSH 102
This course explores the history of the Byzantine Empire between the sixth and fifteenth centuries C.E. It thus provides a sequel to HISTAM 314, The World of Late Antiquity. Students who complete all assignments for the course will gain a better understanding of many different aspects of Byzantine history and culture. They will also sharpen their skills of historical analysis.
HISTAM 314: Examines the transformation of the ancient world from the third-century crisis of the Roman Empire to the rise of Islamic civilization. Explores the manifold political, cultural, and social changes that transformed Europe, the Mediterranean, and the Near East between the third and the eighth centuries CE.

Examines the erotic and beautiful Song of Songs within the context of ancient (and medieval) Near Eastern love poetry and correlates close readings of the book with various interpretations it has received from antiquity until today. No knowledge of Hebrew or the Bible is required.
Our topics over the term. 1) The transformation of the Jews from an agricultural people into a mercantile minority in the first millennium. 2) Economic growth from 1815 to 1914 raised Jewish numbers and per capita incomes in Europe more than those of any other substantial European group. At the same time both numbers and per capita incomes were largely stagnant in the Middle East. 3) Jewish migration from East to West from Europe to the US and from rural areas to cities was one of the chief ways in which Jewish incomes rose between 1840 and 1914. 4) Jews and finance from the Middle Ages to the present day. 5) The economic causes and consequences of Zionism- the movement for a Jewish country which beginning as a larget scale movement about 1880 created the State of Israel in 70 years. 6) The conflict between Israel and its Arab neighbors which has helped make Israel a center of the high tech. 7) The interactions of the economics of education of language and of religion. About half the course is devoted to the economic history of the Jews outside of the Land of Israel. Jews were for a thousand years a “mercantile minority” The Jews like the Chinese of Southeast Asia succeeded economically to an extent that aroused hostility and persecution. Violent examples of persecution against members of mercantile minorities can be found in many places. In 2010 murderous riots have been directed against the Kikuyu in Kenya and the Chinese in Tibet. After a period of reduced tension in the middle 19th Century Anti-Jewish hostility intensified from 1880 until in the 1940s one third of the Jewish people were murdered. The threat to life was one of the chief forces impelling Jews to migrate to Israel from Europe and from Moslem countries.

This course introduces the modern scholarly study of the New Testament and the socio-cultural milieu within the New Testament literature originated. Attention is given to significant Jewish and Greco-Roman traditions and institutions that were of importance in shaping the earliest Christian movements. The various writings in the New Testament are examined individually, with interest in such issues as: The relationship between the author and audience and the immediate historical context of the writing, if known; literary genre; intertextuality; key religious issues of concern in a given writing, and their relation to the diverse spectrum of developing early Christian thought, practice, and social formation.

This course invites students to consider the range of theological outlooks and patterns of life that are commonly defined by the term “Kabbalah” and to interpret their cultural meaning. After preliminary discussion of the antecedents of Kabbalah in the pre-Islamic Middle East, we will focus on the cultural significance of the Zohar, the central text of Kabbalah, that first appeared in late 13th-century Spain. This unit of the course will also survey such crucial post-Zoharic Kabbalistic movements as Lurianic Kabbalah, Sabbatianism and Hasidism. The final unit of the course concludes with reflections on the meaning of the recent explosion of interest in Kabbalah among Jewish and non-Jewish “New Age” communities in secular, post-Christian culture. We devote special attention to the influential teachings of Rabbi Philip Berg, founder of the Kabbalah Centre.

Modern political and economic systems are founded and maintained by combinations of subtle workings of ideas and overt violence. This course examines how the systems of meaning and social organization we call ‘culture(s)’ organize the experiences, ideologies, and institutions of power which we call ‘politics’ at the local, national, and international level. This course introduces a critical approach to understanding the relationship between culture and politics by examining the problem of political violence and armed conflict and its relationship to society and culture in the post-WWII world. The questions this course will address include: In what ways are strategies of power produced through forms of knowledge that are culturally organized? How does power become internalized and personalized so that people actively reproduce it? What does it mean for a society to become ‘militarized’? What are ‘cultures of terror’ and what does it mean to rule by fear rather than by consent or coercion? How is torture and the violent inscription of the body a ‘modern’ political practice? How do cultural expectations shape international recognition of conflicts as ‘war’, ‘civil insurgency’, or ‘terrorism’ and of impacted people and populations as ‘victims’, ‘refugees’, ‘perpetrators’ or ‘terrorists’? What is the distinction between modern and postmodern warfare and how do their political economies differ? How do post-cold war peace-making paradigms of accountability and reconciliation rely on the transformative possibilities of political culture? We adopt an ethnographic perspective to examine these questions through the examination of processes of political violence and armed conflict in the daily lives of ordinary people, drawing on case studies from the US, South Asia, Africa, and the Middle East.

ZIONISM, NATIONALISM, AND SOVEREIGNTY
Zionism endures as a flashpoint in debates about the history, meaning, and morality of nationalism. Jewish nationalism’s ambiguous position in the study of international relations makes it an ideal case study for understanding the historical and contemporary forces fueling nationalism and the processes underscoring the limits of national sovereignty. By focusing on scholarly debates from a variety of disciplines about the past, present, and future of Zionism, students will have the opportunity to consider the dilemmas of balancing national self-determination with individual rights in an age of globalization.

This course introduces students to the major theoretical approaches to international relations—Realism, Liberalism, and Marxism—and uses these approaches to address a variety of issues. For example, we will discuss the rise of the modern state system, the origins of WWI, the Cold War, the Gulf Wars, genocide in Rwanda, free trade, globalization, North-South relations, the environment, and human rights. Primary course objectives are to demonstrate how theory influences our explanations; to familiarize students with some important issues in international politics; and most important, to help students evaluate contemporary issues in international politics.

War is a central feature of international politics. The course begins with an overview of the development of modern warfare, but it focuses on the causes of war. Is war inevitable given the structure of the international system, or can, for example, changes in beliefs or the spread of democracies temper aggressive appetites or eliminate the security dilemma? We will examine these questions by focusing on World War I, World War II, the Persian Gulf War, and the war in Iraq. The course concludes with a discussion of the ethics of war.

For almost four millennia, Persian and Iranian peoples and cultures have helped shape the histories of the Middle East, India, Central Asia, and the world. From Zoroaster and Rumi to the Ayatollah Khomeini, from the Silk Road to the Oil Boom, and from the ancient Persian Empire to the nation-states of Iran, Afghanistan, and Tajikistan, Persianate civilizations have by turns dazzled, perplexed, inspired, and challenged. In this course, we will explore sources that range from ancient inscriptions and mystical Sufi poetry to movies, novels, and the internet, in a quest to better understand the many faces of Persian and Iranian civilizations.
