MIDDLE EAST COUNTRIES IN THE WAKE OF MACROECONOMIC LIBERALIZATION
Course Description: This lecture course consists of three parts. In the first section theoretical approaches are introduced. Of main interest is the discussion of the concept of liberalism, which is rooted in the Enlightenment era. Of specific importance are the ideological relations of liberalism and orientalism to the ongoing macro-economic restructuring of Middle East countries. The second section elaborates on the causes and structures of regional disparities in the Middle East. The third section focuses on the articulated processes of globalization and polarization of local conflicts.

GEOGRAPHICAL PERSPECTIVES OF GLOBALIZATION
Course Description: This seminar consists of four sections. As an introduction the descriptive term of globalization will be examined and transferred into an analytical concept. In the subsequent section the driving forces of globalization will be investigated, such as colonialism, the ongoing processes of commodification, the internationalization of knowledge, and the growing importance of transnational corporations. Using case studies, the third section deals with the effects and consequences of globalization on different scales (household-level, regional level, etc.). In the fourth section, questions about alternatives to a globalized society will be raised.

SPECIAL STUDIES: COMPARATIVE ISLAMIC STUDIES
(SLN: 9202/9203), 5 Credits
Course Description: Faculty & students from more than a dozen departments and programs will be meeting in a year-long seminar focused on the extraordinary resources for the comparative study of Islam at the UW. Throughout the year, the seminar will host guest lectures from prominent international scholars from across North America and the Middle East to Africa and Southeast Asia. The seminar is open to graduate students and select undergraduates in all disciplines. Students are not required to take all three quarters, nor is any quarter prerequisite for another. Each quarter, a small team of faculty supervises student progress, though more than two dozen UW faculty members are involved in the Comparative Islamic Studies program. Each of the three quarters has a different focus. The Fall Quarter seminar is a "pro-seminar" designed to expose students to a variety of approaches and resources available for the comparative study of Islam. Each week, a different faculty member will introduce students to diverse disciplinary fields, information and funding resources, and other research strategies in the field. Interested graduate students should contact Professor Brannon Wheeler at wheelerb@u.washington.edu or NELC at 543-6033 Fall Term Supervising Faculty: Professors Brannon Wheeler and Ahmad Karimi-Hakkak Wednesdays 1:30-4:30 Lewis Annex 1 - Room 110 (directly behind Lewis Hall)

POLITICAL SCIENCE

(SLN: 6828)
POL S 325 A ARAB-ISRL CONFLICT (5 Cr) GOLDBERG
MTWThF 9:30-10:20 *RAI 121
This course will examine the Arab-Israeli conflict during this century as a process with three distinct phases. The first phase lasted from about 1905 to 1948 and was primarily a conflict between Jewish immigrants and Palestinian Arabs to create basic institutions of a state. The second phase, from 1949 to 1984, was primarily a conflict between existing states. The third phase, from 1985 to the present has again become a conflict between a Palestinian community in the West Bank/Gaza and Israel over the creation of new state institutions. The basic institutions of a state include the armed forces, central bureaucracies, representative institutions and legal systems which undertake the substantive tasks of defining property rights, allocating goods, and adjudicating conflicts. The Arab-Israeli conflict is thus properly several conflicts, between the Zionist and Palestinian movements, between Israel and the surrounding Arab states, and between the Palestine Authority and Israel. Special attention will be paid to ecological issues, primarily water use, as a way to better understand contemporary dimensions and the larger implications of this conflict. We will examine these conflicts separately. This course is not designed, however, as a historical court of last resort or to provide judgments against parties to the various conflicts. Much of the historical background will be covered in lectures and examinations will be predicated on the assumption that all lectures were attended and readings completed. There are no prerequisites and the course is suitable for non-majors. Texts required books are Amos Elon, Founders and Sons; Joel Migdal and Baruch Kimmering, The Palestinians; Charles D. Smith, Palestine and the Arab-Israeli Conflict; and Miriam Lowi, Water and Power.

M W 7:00-9:20pm *SAV 241
Course Description: An introduction to the domestic politics of the states of the Middle East--i.e., the 17 Arab states, Israel, Turkey, and Iran. Is there a Middle East regional variant of the politics of nation-state building and of the politics of socioeconomic development in the 20th Century? How have inter-Arab politics, the Arab-Israeli conflict, the Cold War and the politics of oil affected the domestic politics of these states? What major changes/transformations, if any, have taken place over the past few decades, and what are the prospects for the future? For example, what have been (and might be) the effects of the revival of political Islam and calls for democratization and market-driven economics? Assignments: There will be a map quiz, midterm, and final (short answers, short essays). No term paper, but a modest research exercise designed to introduce you to sources that provide easy access to a lot of very recent political and socioeconomic event data on the countries and current affairs of the Middle East--i.e, that allow you easily to monitor and reconstruct the recent past in the Middle East. You will also be required to buy the New York Times on a daily basis and to create a file on current Middle East politics. Texts: Ismael and Ismael, Politics and Government in the Middle East and North Africa, and Bill and Springborg, Politics in the Middle East. Grading: Exams: 60% Research exercise: 20% Quiz/class participation: 10% Clipping file: 10% Total 100%
