SLN: 9923 SISME 590 A

MW 1:30-3:20 THO 202

This course will take an interdisciplinary approach, with a study of three major river basins in the Middle East, and the historic, geographic, political, environmental and legal factors that lead to conflict or cooperation. The Tigris-Euphrates basin is considered the cradle of civilization, but Turkey controls the headwaters of the Euphrates River, and the downstream Arab states, Syria and Iraq, are highly dependent on the flow of fresh water. The focus of the course will be an attempt to answer a fundamental question: What can nations do to develop their common water resources in a cooperative, sustainable and equitable manner, thereby avoiding the risk of violent conflict in the region?

Books and readers in the Roman Empire and Early Christianity

The work of the seminar will include the close reading, analysis, and comparison of a few selected cosmological myths from these philosophical and religious traditions ranging from Mediterranean antiquity to the modern Middle East (e.g., the modern Mandaeans). Because these traditions include texts in a variety of languages, all of which will not be controlled by seminar members, we will use English translations of selected texts to provide a basis for common discussion in the seminar, with the expectation that students in the seminar will be working with at least one example in its original language where possible. The new anthology edited by Willis Barnstone and Marvin Meyer, The Gnostic Bible (2003) will provide part of the translations from primary texts to be used for common reading and discussion in the seminar. We will apportion to individual seminar members some specialized responsibilities for various texts or authors that are of relevance for the seminar's topic.

An introduction to the history of the ancient Near East, Egypt, Greece and Rome. The course provides a broad survey of the cultures, social structures, and political institutions of these societies. We will use stories as mirrors that reflect the worlds and concepts of the different cultures that we will study. Our questions will focus on two concerns: (1) microcosm- human life, the world of getting and spending, ruling and being ruled and (2) macrocosm-cosmic order, the world of the gods where human efforts are pale or are unimportant.

SLN: 4924 HIST 260 A SLAVERY(5 Cr) J. BACHARACH

TTh 1:30-3:20 SIG 225

A comparative study of the institution of slavery in a number of societies. The course will briefly examine the topic within the context of the Ancient Near East, Greece, Rome, the medieval Mediterranean world including Western Europe and the Islamic Middle East, Sub-Saharan Africa, Latin America, and the United States. The students will, whenever possible, use contemporary documents for class discussions and the term paper. Emphasis will be placed on class participation in analyzing the various sources available for different periods and societies.

MTWTh 9:30-10:20 FIS 201
(SLN: 4935 AA QZ) F 8:30-9:20 ARC 025

This course is an introduction to the history of science from prehistory to the early seventeenth century, and to the means by which historians of science construct such narratives. It will begin with the idea of science as a culture's systematic worldview, dependent on a view of nature in context, by looking at cosmological ideas in prehistory. The course will then look at the creation of natural knowledge in Egypt, Mesopotamia, classical Greece and Rome, early Islam, medieval and renaissance Europe. We will look at questions of cause and effect related to astronomy, optics, mathematics, the sciences of motion, biology and medicine, and relate them to cultural contexts.

SLN: 4947 HIST 490 A (TOPICS IN HIST) NUMISMATICS(5 Cr) J. BACHARACH

W 3:30-5:20 MGH 293

Numismatics, the systematic, scientific study of coins, paper money, and related material, dates to the Renaissance when Italian scholars began systematically examining Greek and Roman pieces. Today the study of numismatics includes coins, paper money, commemorative pieces, and other related items. Economic exchanges including international trade far more complex than a simple barter system had been going on for thousands of years before the invention of coinage in the sixth century B.C.E. Long after coinage was introduced into the Western and Middle Eastern worlds, large parts of the globe continued to calculate exchanges by other means such as weighed quantities of unstamped metal, cloth, and cowry shells, but coinage spread because it had a number of advantages. It was small enough for easy counting, weighing and carrying; it was not easily destructible; it had a marking on it implying that some authority was guaranteeing its relative quality; and it was a vehicle by which the authorizing authority was making a statement about itself. When studying coinage the class will focus on two basic questions: what's on it and what's in it. Both questions, in turn, rest on a number of assumptions, which will be examined during the term.

SLN: 9728 HSTAM 518 A LATE ANTIQUITY (5 Cr) J. WALKER
