The progression has been slow but steady, however, and the challenges remain. While the city has seen significant growth in recent years, many residents still feel that they are not benefiting from the same advantages as those who live in more economically advanced areas.

Many people in Bangalore feel left behind by the rapid development of the city. They feel that the benefits of growth are not being shared equally, and that the government is not doing enough to address the needs of its citizens.

Key developments

- More abductions: This is just one of many reports of Boko Haram's continued violent activities.
- Improved security: The government has been working to improve security in the region, but there is still much work to be done.
- Continued protest: Despite the government's efforts, there are still many who feel that they are not being heard.
