Telephone _____ E-mail address _____

Please list the names of one or two professors (other than language instructors) at the University of Washington who are familiar with your work on European topics. They may be contacted for additional information.

1. _____ 2. _____

This application must be accompanied by:

- 1 A UW transcript (unofficial OK).
- 2 An essay in which you discuss your proposed research, and in which you address, among other things, the following questions: (a) do you have (or plan to have by Spring Quarter 2013) a reading knowledge of the European language connected with your proposed topic of research? (b) have you done course work related to your proposed topic of research? (c) have you produced any written course work connected with your proposed topic of research, or plan to produce such written work in courses taken before Spring Quarter 2013? (d) do you have a faculty member in mind who could potentially serve as your mentor for this project?
- 3 A copy of a research paper you have written for a class which you think best represents the analytical writing skills needed for the senior thesis, not necessarily your highest graded paper.

Eligibility

At the time of application, students should have completed the following:

- JSIS A 301 (5 cr), JSIS 201 (5), required European survey course (usually 5 cr)
- At least one year of a European language, with second-year study or beyond in progress
- At least 90 total credits, including at least 20 credits applicable to major requirements

Information on the structure of and criteria for the Research-Intensive track is available from links at http://jsis.washington.edu/advise/catalog/eur\_ba.shtml.

Timeline

Proposals will be considered on a rolling basis until spaces in the thesis seminar (JSIS A 495; approx. 10 spaces) for the following spring are filled. Students may submit proposals no earlier than the start of their junior year, and should file no later than the first Monday in December of their senior year.

These materials should be submitted all in one packet to the Office of Student Services(111 Thomson Hall)
