REQUIRED COURSES

JSIS 201 MAKING OF 21ST CENT (I&S)

16017 A 5 MWF 230-320 BAG 131 BACHMAN,DAVID M

Provides a historical understanding of the twentieth century and major global issues today. There are two main themes of this course. The first is the making and un-making of global orders. Over the course of the last hundred years (or so), there have been numerous attempts to impose economic, political, military, and cultural frameworks in the name of various ideals like peace, security, democracy, and development. This course will explore many of those varying efforts and pay particular attention to the work that has gone into the connections and conflicts between “First” and “Third” World projects. The second theme concerns the interplay between structures and actors in various processes of international political economy. On both global and local levels, the old observation of Karl Marx remains largely true: people make their own history, but they do not make it under conditions of their own choosing. We will examine both how global forces structure the decisions of elite and popular sectors, as well as how political actors negotiate, contest, and transform global forces.

JSIS A 302 POLTIC/CULTURES EUR (I&S) REQ

16105 A 5 MW 930-1120 SAV 132 WENDLER,FRANK

Since the turn of the millennium, European democracies have gone through fundamental changes as a consequence of two major and related challenges. On the one hand, political systems have been transformed through a transition from politics at the national level to the emergence of a multi-level governance system. On the other, as a response to this trend of de-nationalization, new forms of political representation and decision-making have emerged. This has resulted in the emergence of new political parties, mobilization and protest in civil society, an increased role of direct democracy, and calls for a stronger role of local and regional government.

Addressing this topic, the class will introduce you into the study of political systems in Europe, with an emphasis on the topic of democratic transformation. A special focus is put on the study of politics in Germany, Britain, France, Italy, Poland and Spain.

EU Visiting Fellow, Ernesto Penas-Lado (Director in the European Commission) will be co-teaching a portion of this course.
