

Crisis Negotiation Simulation

JSIS 549 | Summer A Term | 4 Credits | Professor Robert Pekkanen

Crisis in the Mediterranean: Nationalism Boiling Over

What happens when NATO allies come into conflict? Can diplomacy subdue the nationalist passions that have torn a country apart? Is the European Union (EU) capable of solving divisive territorial issues? Students learn and apply skills in negotiation, crisis decision-making, leadership, and teamwork to answer these gripping questions through hands-on learning in a fascinating simulation administered this summer through a partnership between the UW Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies and the U.S. Army War College.

A glittering jewel in the Eastern Mediterranean, Cyprus provides the backdrop for this simulation exercise. Just off the coast of Turkey, Syria, Lebanon, and Israel, the island nation lies at the crossroads of European and Middle Eastern civilizations, a location which forged its rich history and complex politics. Diplomatic negotiating teams seek to bring a lasting peace to the island, torn since the 1960s into antagonistic Greek and Turkish communities. A key case for international conflict resolution itself, Cyprus also holds critically important lessons for those who hope to solve other territorial or ethnic conflicts. The struggle to fix Cyprus may impact the future of the European Union, while failure threatens to fracture the NATO Alliance. The stakes could not be higher.

Participants will role play ambassadors on diplomatic teams, charged by their home governments with negotiating a solution advantageous to their national interests. The highlight of the class is a two-day simulation exercise. Teams are paired with a mentor, giving students the opportunity to work closely with top U.S. diplomats including former U.S. Ambassador to Cyprus John Koenig, business executives from Booz Allen Hamilton consulting, military leaders from Joint Base Lewis-McChord, and UW faculty experts. U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering will play the role of United Nations Special Advisor on Cyprus. One of the most accomplished United States diplomats, Ambassador Pickering has served as Under Secretary for Political Affairs at the U.S. Department of State, as well as U.S. Ambassador to the Russian Federation, India, Israel, El Salvador, Nigeria, Jordan, and the United Nations.

Students describe the class as a once-in-a-lifetime experience! Don't miss out!

Contact maais@uw.edu to register
For more info visit <http://bit.ly/2nLBDKC>

MASTER OF ARTS IN APPLIED INTERNATIONAL STUDIES
UNIVERSITY of WASHINGTON
The Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies

Class runs June 19 - July 19 | T/Th 10:30-12:20 | All Day Simulation July 13 & 14