This course introduces multiple print cultures that developed in 19th and 20th century Asia— China, Japan, Korea, and South Asia. We will survey the history of the book in Asia using a comparative frame. Topics covered include manuscript and pre-modern print cultures; technologies such as woodblock and lithography; print capitalism; readerships; serialized fiction and literature; presses, prizes, and publishing houses; periodicals; and the digital present.

This course serves as a core elective for the Graduate Certificate in Textual and Digital Studies. It is intended for advanced undergraduate and graduate students interested in textual studies, the history of the book, and print technologies and cultures. No background in Asian languages is required, but students with proficiency in an Asian language will be able to complete a final project using the language of specialty. Assignments will include hands-on work with print texts from Asia; short writing assignments; leading a discussion; and a final project using primary sources.

COMPARATIVE HISTORY OF IDEAS:

CHID 480 ADV SPECIAL TOPICS: Race, Colonialism, Diaspora (I&S)
12617 A 5 TTh 230-420 MGH 287 REDDY, CHANDAN C.

Post -WWII world history could easily be called the age of the Postcoloniality, the period in which the European powers that directly controlled till then 85% of the world's land mass lost their colonies due to freedom struggles across the non-Western world. Though postcoloniality indicates the legal identity of the former colonies, as indicates the legal identity of the former colonies, as independent political states, neocolonialism and globalization better describe the economic system that emerged in this period of so-called postcolonial modernity. This course will introduce you to the critical study of colonialism, imperialism, racism, and nationalism.

This course is intended to introduce you to the Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences (IAS) program and concepts of interdisciplinary knowledge production more generally. It is structured around questions of how knowledge is produced and why ideas matter. This particular course is structured around the production of knowledge about Pakistan. We will use this topic to understand the relationship between ideologies and actions and the ways in which they shape the lives of people, countries and regions. The course addresses the relationship between different understandings of imperialism, nationalism, colonialism, fundamentalism, war-on-terror, the global Islamic caliphate, human rights discourse, international relations, law, militarism, gender, and religion, and the representation of these issues by various authors and disciplines.

BIS 339 GLOBAL CLR STDY

Politics of Bollywood Cinema
As one of the most powerful media institutions in the country, Bollywood, or Bombay cinema, plays a central role in shaping India’s ‘national’ culture. This course examines Bollywood’s social, political, and cultural significance and looks into cinematic representations of the some of the key moments in contemporary India. A close investigation of a variety of genres will lead us to comprehend Bollywood’s narrative organization in the way it approaches a diversity of national, class, sectarian, gendered, and sexual identities both at ‘home’ and within the South Asian diaspora. The class will investigate cinematic constructions of post-independence nation-building, civil strife, repression of popular uprisings, religious fundamentalism, patriarchy, and gender and sexual politics.

This course explores representations of structures of domination and subordination in postcolonial literatures, with a focus on the lives of minorities, aborigines, immigrants, refugees, and members of the fourth world. It examines the role played by transnationalism in literary theory. It complicates the meaning of national literature, focuses on geographical locations previously marginalized, and draws our attention to literatures situated between the metropolis and its peripheries. It examines the “transnational turn” in literary studies introduced by a study of postcolonial, multicultural and minority literatures and their intersection with the processes of globalization. We investigate the meaning of globalization as a phenomenon - cultural and economic – rooted in the histories of colonization, decolonization and post-colonialism, which eschews the notion of homogenous cultures, undermines the idea of cultural autonomy, and interrogates the center-periphery model.
