

JSIS 485/585: Tragedies, Trauma and Resiliency: The 2015 Earthquake as a Prism to Explore Social Issues in Contemporary Nepal

New Special Topics Course in South Asian Studies for Autumn 2015

Join us for a new course which will explore the local, regional, and global community engagement, relations, and systems as Nepal and the resilient Nepali people try to recover and rebuild following the April 2015 earthquake disaster and trauma. We will critically examine the connection between the past and the present complex socio-cultural-economic-political-environmental and immigration contexts within which the current relief efforts in Nepal are taking place. We will engage members from the local Nepali communities, returned Peace Corps volunteers, INGOs, NGOs, and UW scholars in meaningful dialogues to expand students' Nepal.

Instructor: Maya Magarati, PhD, School of Social Work
