TTh 8:30-9:20 *ART 003

Major achievements in painting, sculpture, architecture, and the decorative arts in Europe, the Near East, and North Africa, from prehistoric times to the beginnings of Christianity.

The course provides an introduction to the art and architecture of ancient Egypt, Mesopotamia and the Near East, the Bronze Age Aegean cultures, ancient Greece, the Hellenistic world, Etruria, and the Roman Empire down to the coming of Christianity. It also offers some preliminary training in visual analysis and a practical introduction to the critical vocabulary of art history.

There is a mid-term exam, a written assignment, and a final exam. The class assignments are weighted in the following way: mid-term exam: 25% term paper: 35% final exam: 40% Extra credit may also be awarded on the basis of student participation in discussion sections.

COMPARATIVE RELIGION

INTRO NEW TESTAMENT; RELIG 220 AA, 5 Cr, (SLN: 7316) WILLIAMS, M

Other sections available

MTWTh 10:30-11:20 *SMI 120

Th 2:30-3:20 *THO 325

Modern scholarly methods of research and analysis in dealing with New Testament books and their interpretation. Genres of various books (gospel, epistle, sacred history, apocalypse); problems of the relationships among author, material, and intended audience; relationships between theme and image.

The students will be introduced to modern critical study of the New Testament (=NT). Though now often spoken of in the singular, as a unified document, the NT is actually a collection of what were originally individual writings composed by various early Christians over a period of many years. What is now a standardized collection took shape over several generations. This course is concerned with understanding the NT writings in their original historical settings. Students learn some of the possible circumstances and purposes for the composition of individual writings; what can be known about the authors; key themes found in various writings, and the background for these; interrelationships among NT writings, and their significance; and in general, the relation between these writings and what can be known about the social history and culture of earliest Christian movements.

Offered Jointly with POL S 432 YA

MW 7:00-9:20pm *SAV 317

What Students Can Expect to Learn from this Course: Course focuses on the revival since the mid-1970s of political Islam and what has come to be called "Islamic fundamentalism," especially in the Middle East. What are the nature and variety of political Islam today, and how does this resurgence or revival compare to those in the past? What are its causes, and what are its implications for the Islamic world as well as for the rest of the world, the U.S. included? (For example, is it a "threat" to us and our interests?) Finally, is political Islam compatible with democratic politics and international order?

General Method of Instruction: Lectures and discussion.

Recommended Preparation for Success in the Course: No prerequisites, although a basic course on Middle East Politics, history, etc. is a good idea. Suitable for non-majors with some background in political science.

General Nature of Assignments: Readings from Esposito, The Islamic Threat: Myth or Reality?; Beinart and Stork (eds), Political Islam; and Esposito and Voll, Islam and Democracy.

Basis on which Grades are Assigned:

Two Exams: 40%
Term Paper: 40%
Clipping File 10%
Class Participation 10%
TOTAL 100%

SPECIAL TOPICS: SISJE 490 E, 5 Cr. (SLN: 8835) WHEELER, D

"MEMORY TO MOBILIZATION"

TTh 3:30-5:20 *THO 235

This course looks at the movement to establish and consolidate a Jewish State in Palestine. It treats this movement from the perspective of a collective action problem: Some of the questions we will address include--how did early Zionist organizers conceptualize strategies to ensure the movement's success? What organizational foundations were established? What role did media/public culture play in transforming memory into action? How did a movement facing such odds succeed? As a global political concept, what did Zionism teach us about international politics? In the post-state period, many Israelis are in the processes of constructing revisionist histories of the Zionist movement and its final expression in statehood. What do these reinterpretations of the future in light of the past teach us about contemporary post-revolutionary politics in Israel?
